Foreword

Don't let the red endsheets fool you or suggest subversive activities on our part. The digs at present day politics and politicians were made with tongue in cheek, and any resemblance to actual situations is pure jest.

But who among us, somewhere in his wildest imaginings, has not pictured himself in the role of a great general, directing the military forces of a great nation? Who has never seen himself as he rendered that mighty decision from the bench of the highest court in the land? Indeed there are few who, in their dreams, haven't bowed politely as the recipients of the greatest ovation from their colleagues in the House or Senate? Yes, and most of us have "experienced" that feeling as we sat behind the battery of microphones and cameras to chat with a nation of millions of people as their chief executive.

We of the ALHAMBRAN fully appreciate our American system of government. We realize, too, that the fulfilment of such dreams could come about in no other country but ours. We are certain that only through the continuance of a fine spirit of cooperation can you, your children, and future generation live happy, carefree lives in our great nation, where real democracy is at work.

If anyone wonders why or how this wire came about, he may trace his memory to the hottest day in September. It was on that day that Senator Philablaster, shoeless, bedraggled, bearded, and entirely minus any confidence in the generosity of the American motorist, limped along a road going no place and came to a telegraph office.

Seems as how this pathetic fellow left a Democratic bed of roses "down Georgia way" for a spot of campaigning in the wooly West. But rumor has it he'll find more than just a group of voters out here. For the Democrats and Republicans are backed against a ten foot fence—and by an up-and-coming third party at that. When this new group was working on a list of presidential eligibles, someone recalled the unwritten, yet irrevocable, law sealed in the hearts of all mothers: that every red-blooded American boy (and why not girl?) has the right to be the chief executive of our United States. Following a heated discussion, both sexes developed bad cases of presidentitis.

And so Senator Philablaster, as a committee of one, was directed by Washington to investigate suspicious third parties and to study their symbols, platform, and resolutions. Word reached him that a political organization, originating with the son of one of the members of the Bull Moose party of 1912, had sprung up in the vicinity of Alhambra. The Senator chose our city as his first stop-over, for it had been reliably reported that Alhambra High School was a pretty good training ground for future leaders.

That is why on September 17, 1951, when we skipped blithely back to school, we had a very inquisitive observer on the sidelines; he soon began his endless search in dusty corners, in secret meetings, and in the wide open schoolrooms for any shady actions or people. Not long after he began, he had vital news to report:

> Local high school likely spot for funny doings STOP Everybody's aimin' for that plush brown chair in the White House STOP Help!

Board of Education

Any investigation should start at the top and work down. An 8:00 a.m. call to Mr. Bettinger and an inexperienced PBX operator put the Senator on the wrong circuit.

"But, Mr. Stokesbary, do you really think we can get that much passed?"

"Certainly, Bill! After all, look who we've got on our side."

"Will they go for additional taxes to build those new schools?"

In less time than it takes to say "J. Vetonicus Philablaster" there he was, waiting to see Mr. George Bettinger. "All this waiting; me, a United States senator, here to investigate corruption and I'm kept waiting. Young lady, take this message:

Something about special appropriation STOP Kept waiting to see superintendent STOP Much interest teachers students administration STOP

Philablaster

Washington's going to hear about this!"

"Mr. Bettinger will see you now," came the almost inaudible whisper.

The Senator, always well-informed before he went off half-cocked, proceeded to expound his theories concerning school board action, danger of crookedness, secret meetings, etc. But Mr. Bettinger quietly explained that the unusual growth in our school population would necessitate the building of new schools and additions to the existing plants.

"But that will require a Senate ratification," the little gentleman interposed.

"No, on! This is only a local affair, and the people of this district will vote on the bond issue."

Finally, after an hour of outbreaks and interruptions, Superintendent Bettinger was able to explain to our distinguished visitor. The following wire left our local telegraph office:

> Disregard last communication completely STOP Bettinger and Stokesbary have situation in hand STOP No pork barrel here STOP Worthy project STOP Need new coat hat blown away in March wind STOP

ROBERT F. GRAY

Having found nothing sensational in the Board of Education, to report back to his fellow congressmen, Senator Philablaster decided he shouldn't waste any time in getting over to the high school to look into the administration. H e was sure he would find corruption there. Who ever heard of an administration without any?

A look of serious earnestness covered his face as he walked toward the main office. Entering, he demanded to see Mr. Gray. He had hardly finished demanding when Angie spoke her usual piece: "He isn't in, I don't know where he is, and I don't know if he will be back. Would you like to leave a message?" This careless statement by an innocent bystander did the trick. Philablaster was ready to report negligence of duty. Perhaps he could put in malfeasance of office; undoubtely the next office, the Counselors', was in cahoots.

Here he thought he surely had discovered a gold mine of dissatisfaction when he saw the scowling faces of the Counselors. Walking into an office whose sign read "Candidates of '70," he found four wistful looking people studying a long paper. "Oh, for the days when they just wanted to change their schedules. Now they insist that not one of the courses prepares them for their future occupation. Everybody wants to be president. Well we had better get busy on this new list of subjects: the art of handshaking, baby kissing, spending public funds . . ."

A little hungry by this time, the Senator hastened over to the opposite wing in order to complete his investigation before noon. A look into the first doorway revealed Mr. Stover and Miss Leonard of the Child Welfare division busy figuring out a way for a boy to convince his parents that he should enter the next political campaign; he would need a parental advance to finance his campaign. It seems that these two people are now being swamped with calls from parents complaining that the kids are getting too independent; the kids insist that future presidents should not be asked to do menial tasks.

Fairly comfortable looking chairs in the next office invited his attention. Easing off his gaiters and loosening his cravat, he settled back for a short forty winks. The sound of voices put an end to this. "What do youall do in this presidential preparation school?"

Mrs. Crosswhite told him that she spent most of her time getting her girls ready for the great day when the women would take over and "clean up this mess!" The first of the lot would be ready in about seventeen years. Our good Seantor died a thousand times within the next few moments. A woman president! Mr. Strother broke in with the suggestion that boys were still the best bet for the top office. At least here was a right-thinking, upstanding Southern gentleman. Imagine, if you can, women in all government offices, even an all-female Senate. In Washington such an idea would have called for a two day recess.

Staggering toward his motel, he tried to think of what he could report to Washington. This seemed to satisfy his sense of duty.

Received with many furtive glances and guilty looks STOP Expect to get at root of trouble soon STOP Send money STOP Street not paved with gold out here STOP

Life Can Be Beautiful

To awaken some Monday morning, along about 8:00 a.m., to see the sun shining, the birds singing, to smell breakfast in the course of preparation, to know that no bell at 8:24 is going to jangle you into a classroom . . . Ah, life can be beautiful . . .

This very pleasant prospect is to be the lot of Newton Miller and Don Williams, two gentlemen who leave our faculty to enjoy all those things anyone has ever dreamed about. May your days of leisure bring you the greatest of pleasures.

PTA

"So you see, Senator, the P.T.A. is democracy at its best. It provides the needed colaboration of the school and the home in the promotion of the children's best interests."

"Now, my dear Mrs. Palmatier, I never thought of that. Could you ies' give me a little mo' of that sassafras tea? It's so refreshing. I wonder how much my constituency knows about this?"

"The Parent-Teachers Association is active in most communities. It stands ready to aid the public schools under all circumstances."

It began to seem that the kids were in a rut—they just couldn't get away from school and the schoolroom. When "Mother Is a Freshman" was chosen, some began to despair. But this bunch took the situation in stride, produced a bang-up play, and went on their way. Easter Week, Senior Luncheon, Ditch Day—they lived every one of them up to the hilt.

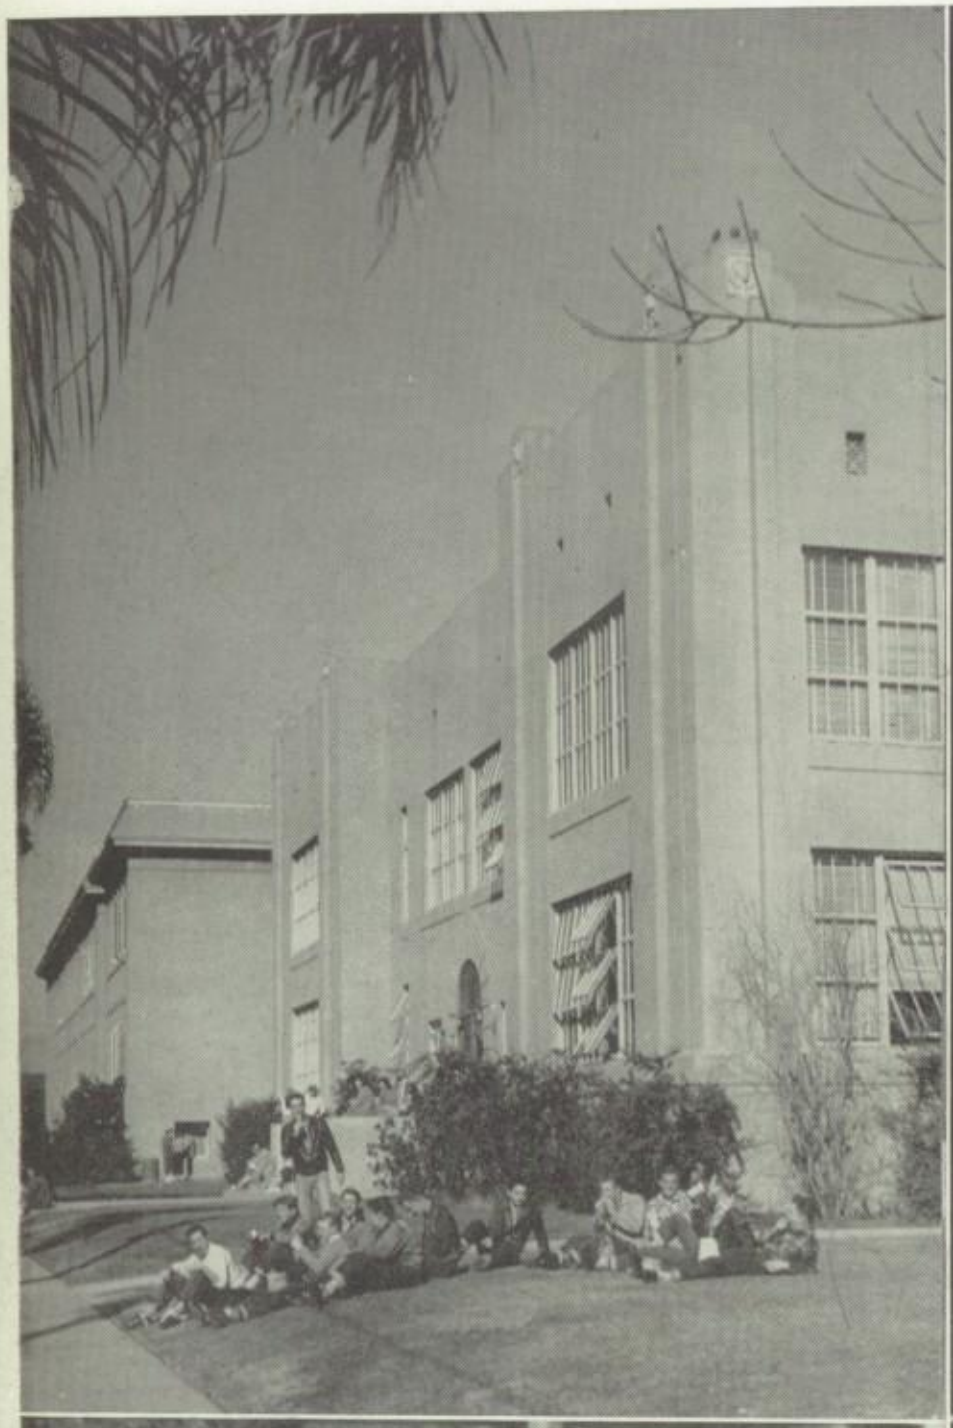
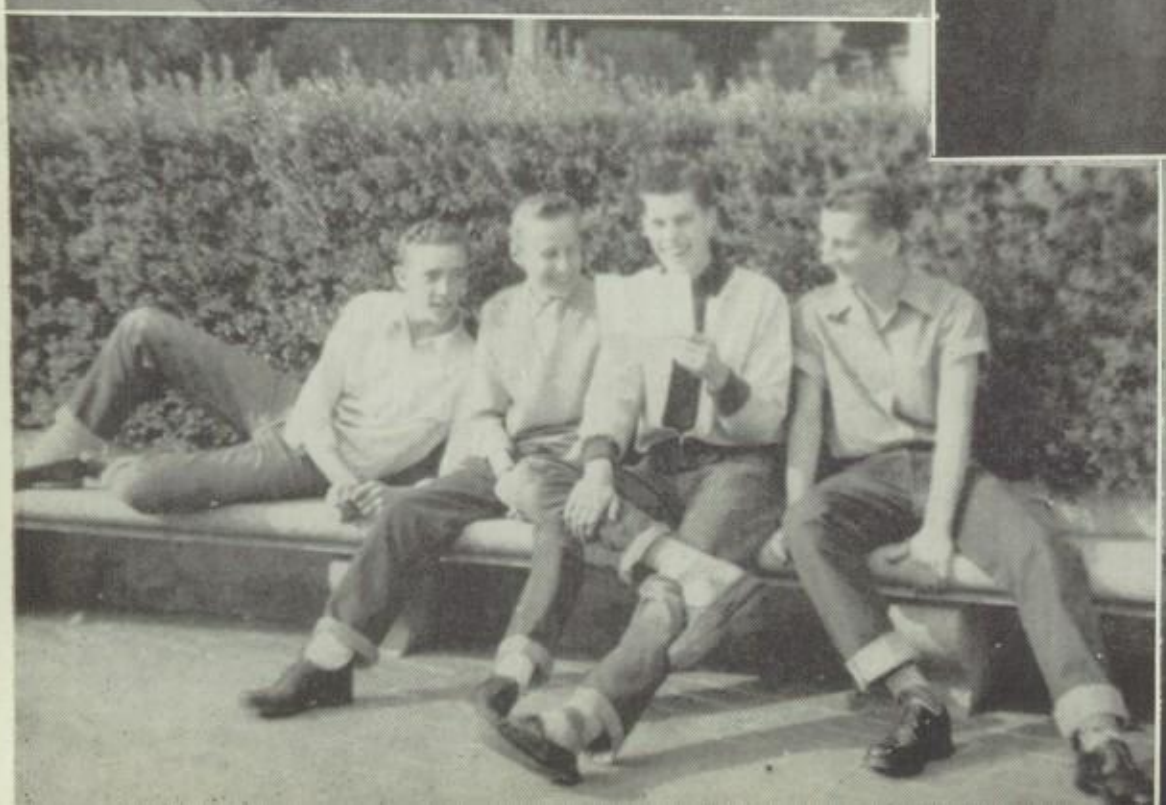
Teal Bivens "Lover"





Again it was back to school with "Our Miss Brooks", but this proved a bonanza, holding over for a third performance, a thousand dollar take.

This class, the largest Alhambra has ever seen, was loaded with talent and ambition. Why, there were more than forty running for class offices. And, Senator, don't let those sweaters fool you. This is not a political organization.

Bob! It's been sweet having you in math. I'll miss your a real keen debater. I hope the rest of 4 years at A+HS are as pleasant as the past. Good luck Bear pupil guy

Ramona McKlow

Seniors W '53

As the years roll by, the winter graduation classes diminish in size. What these groups lack in numbers they manage to make up in activity and enthusiasm.

That of the B12 is not an enviable position; it is that period of wanting to become something—in this case, the big shots of the campus. The day will come, believe us. The day will come.

About 8:00 a. m. Senator J. Vetonicus Philablaster was snoozing in a classroom, having transferred from his motel because of unpaid bills, when he woke up to find himself in an Eastern atmosphere. Amid talk of swinging lanterns and Chinese pagodas, the Junior Council was planning the annual spring prom. The Queen of Oriental Ecstasy was to be crowned on a flower-decked pagoda, but overlooking the patio of the Los Angeles Breakfast Club.

The dance, to take place on a starry night in May, had Philablaster wondering about "educational values" until the other activities of the class took his mind off the subject. These included the order of senior rings and the park party usually held in June. All in all, the class has been pretty busy this year and is looking forward eagerly to next.

Sophomores

Someone once remarked that there is nothing like a sophomore. His intelligence, his position in life, his willingness to tell all on any occasion — this must be the ultimate goal. Such superabundance of good things in life, concentrated within the span of a single year, certainly merits investigation. However, when Philablaster learned that neither of the presidents felt that he could contribute to the national party campaign chest, he wrote the group off quickly as not worthy of his trouble. This was a blow from which the officers and the classes will not recover for at least a year. Then it won't matter.

Since he had always campaigned upon his championing the cause of the underdog, the good Senator took a kindly view of the scrubs and their activities. Dismissing the idea of any skulduggery within this group, he was very vocal in helping to plan the social affairs of the year, giving them the advantage of his varied experience in the Washington social circles. It was generally agreed that he and Miss Power made a lovely picture as they waltzed on skates at the Moonlight Rollerway that night. In fact, such helpful skating has seldom been seen.

These two classes certainly merit consideration as future financiers; their ability to gather in the shekels would have put the best of the Washington five percenters to shame. These kids have it. Let's hope the spirit is catching.

At Alhambra High School we designate our leaders by election to Los Laureados, our senior honor society. To be selected for this honor is one of the highest awards the school can bestow; those few honored each semester can be proud of their achievements.

Nothing provides a better stepping stone than the Scholarship Society. In spite of Senator Philablaster's investigation into the semi-annual holiday without loss of merits, prompted by the "below 70" boys, it is generally agreed that the brains and semi-brains really rate time off for the fine performance they display semester after semester. Even Washington hasn't discovered a substitute for intelligence.

Honor Societies

Some people achieve eminence through politics; some become great artists; some enter a profession; others rise to enviable heights strictly through their ability to lead, to be forever in the vanguard, whether in school or in life after school days are over.

"That looks darned suspicious to me. Wonder if they have broken the State Department code. It's either a secret rendezvous or buried treasure. Must get J. Egbert Mover on the phone and let him put some men on the case. This may be really big!"

Each of the investigators arrived at the appointed place at the time indicated on a map which had been posted beside these strange hieroglyphics on a bulletin board just outside Mr. Gray's office. A car pulled up. There were not three or four passengers; forty-seven girls climbed out of that car and swooped down on the nearest house. Safely inside, one of the girls took out a large hammer and banged on the table. When it did not fall apart, the girls became quiet enough to hear the call to order.

Believe it or not, this was one of the service clubs in action. Such clubs accomplish great things in and for the school and the community. Not only do they give service, but they develop a leadership potential that could one day place some of their members in high positions.

Academic clubs create interest in special fields. There is an unverified rumor that one organization, Jr. something or other, is working on a measure which will create more public offices. They argue that it is rather damaging to know that there can be only one president.

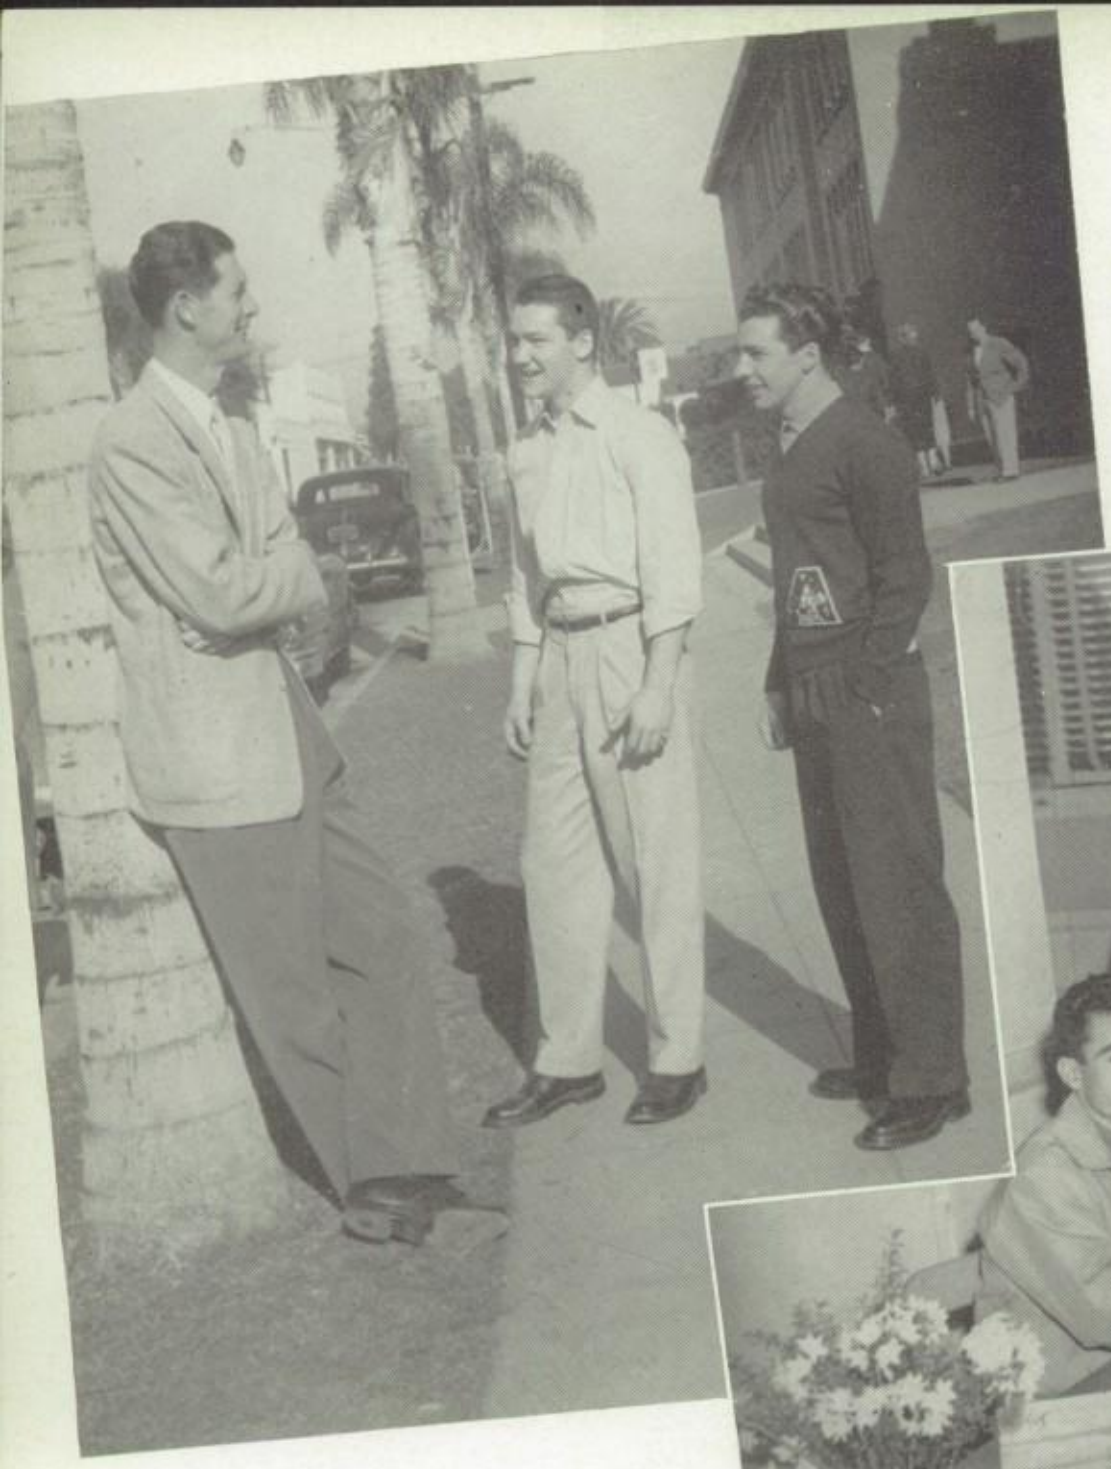
Commission



Strother (adv.), Commissioner Generals, Everett, Girardi.

It was 11:32; the tardy bell had rung and the few (those with lots of merits) were ambling along to class. Sashaying along with them was our friend, who still fancied himself a boy at heart and therefore inconspicuous in the group. He'd just rounded the corner of the auditorium when all of a sudden a long, thin shadow fell across his path. It would take something or someone pretty tall to cast such a shadow. By his faultless reasoning anything that tall must be suspect.

The shadow disappeared down the stairs behind the auditorium and on into the green room at the foot of the stairs. Luckily a large trash can provided an excellent hiding place for our friend while he eavesdropped.

The first voice he heard was that of Mr. Strother. Suddenly the Senator realized that the"shadow" was none other than the Boys' Vice-Principal, a perfectly harmless, gentleman. One word from Mr. Strother and the whole place was in an uproar. Philablaster must have felt right at home, for he soon ioined the ruckus. Soon he turned to the lad at his right and shouted, "What committee is this?" Still no answer. "I say, son, dip your lip and say something; what committee is this?"

"This is no committee. We are discussing the meaning of the school constitution. This is a regular meeting of the Commission."

Now discussions of the constitution were right down the Senator's alley, but he never managed to get a word in edgewise. But then, who does?

Dear Bob,

The Alhambran

The story behind the annual theme is often worth telling. What to write about!

We cogitated, we labored, we thought of the tried-and-true themes and old stand-bys. Nothing appealed. Finally Mrs. Boone caught that industrious artist, Hardy Allen, doodling at his table when he should have been working on a project. She passed his best effort, a little man with a brief case, on to the staff members.

We were amazed! The figure could be one thing only. A senator—from the South. What name? Why, one name only would fit.

What were to be the circumstances? Mr. Cannicott had recently reminded us of the election year. That was it—a Southern senator investigating our school, a presidential preparatory school.

Student Legislature

Success in this phase of student life could fit you for practically anything that comes along—even a political future.

The activities of this legislative body opened Philablaster's eyes and almost closed his mouth. But that was too much to expect. His mouth was so much faster than his brain that he said things he hadn't even thought of yet.

But the speaker was able to halt the move to throw him out bodily when he demanded that one of the duly elected English 8 representatives yield the floor.

Philablaster

For a while the Senator was standard equipment in the girls' locker room; the floor had never been so clean before. Once when he mustered enough courage to look through the keyhole, he received a sound clout on the head as one of the inmates of the secret room came charging out yelling, "Mr. Tajima, oh Mr. Tajima!"

It wasn't until the following Tuesday that he discovered what went on in this room. Immediately he attempted to negotiate for the publication of his reports to Congress—at government expense, of course. The business editor of the MOOR, always looking out for the sheet's best interests, countered with the suggestion that the worthy Senator buy advertising space. For the first time in his life the infuriated gentleman from the South was at a loss for words—even for telegrams.

Even the strongest political parties suffer the pangs of dissension, particularly when they are in the growing stages. This party was no exception. If the good Senator had been listening carefully, or as we say in political circles "had his ear to the ground," he might have sensed that all was not in complete harmony at Presidential Prep. Actually it had resolved itself into a battle of the sexes.

The Boys' Federation was a little weary of playing second fiddle to full-of-fire Girls' League. The spirit of reactivation was in the air.

The girls' organization was not to be outdone. With careful political strategy, using all their feminine wiles, they cleverly planned a fashion show.

The Federation countered with a sports assembly and then went them one better with a tentative revision of their constitution. Now whether such changes are good or bad, it still sounds like progress.

Fortunately Philablaster has not been able to capitalize upon the situation, but the last of the difficulty has not been heard yet.

Lots of luck,
Mrs. Bob - Drury

Mother Is A Freshman

Senator J. Vetonicus Philablaster prided himself on his never-failing vocabulary until he heard two students earnestly discussing the price of a jasminoides rubiaceae. But this was not all. It seemed that the latest fad for boys was a moth-eaten raccoon coat, and that the biology classes had been increased (by girls) 100 per cent. However, all mystery was cleared when the advertising posters for the delightful W'52 comedy about college life, MOTHER IS A FRESHMAN, were put up on Main Street.

Mother may have been a freshman, but she was also quite a dish. And she labored right valiantly on her studies and her efforts to discourage the student and faculty wolves. The cast and committees all did a wonderful job.

P.S. Jaminoides rubiaceae is a gallon-sized name for a common gardenia.

Miss Brooks

The good Senator was stumbling around the auditorium trying to find a door that the janitor had not yet locked. He passed the stage door through which he could hear the wildest commotion. "Somebody must be having a fish-fry," he muttered. "It's been some time since supper; maybe I could invite myself in."

He opened the door and peered around the flats at the back of the stage. Here was a classroom in complete chaos. Covered with snow and knee-deep in Chinese vases, a bicycle, and paint cans was that lovable character, Miss Brooks, with her brood of noisy pupils.

Easily one of our best plays in recent years, "Our Miss Brooks" played to sell-out crowds, even for an extra performance.

Debate

It was music to his ears as the Senator walked by the noisy debate room. Once again he seemed at home — almost like the ordered confusion of the sacred halls of Congress. A tall, dark, handsome lad was in the midst of a long diatribe, which he occasionally punctuated with a plea of "we must give the government power to draft everyone for industry!"

"We won't abide by them fair employment practices in the South. They're unfair," the Senator added almost instinctively.

The debaters, to a man, pounced upon him with, "Constitutional rights!"

"It don't hold down South."

"Ah, let's get down to business and write a case. Is there a speaker against this measure?"

Philablaster strode forward. Such eloquence has seldom been used before to put a whole group to sleep.

Come January, and our good investigator began to feel the need for a change of scene — at government expense, of course. So he borrowed a tent and went down to Bal to soak up some of the sun's rays for a few days. Before he departed, he left explicit instructions to his ace investigator, J. Egbert Mover, to uncover the real reason for our failure to take the league title.

A fair year in football, with fewer injuries and a few more good breaks, might well have been a highly successful year. A good Varsity team, which looked brilliant at times, played the kind of game that has become the tradition at Alhambra High School.

Mover, after a few days of prowling under the bleachers and disrupting Mr. Tableman's equipment room, claimed he had the reason why the team didn't come up with a better record.

His argument was that a team loaded with good material, filled with will to win, and aided with topnotch coaching should have been on the long end of more scores. He claimed that there was good reason to believe that the unidentified student with a maroon sweater, seen early in the season hanging around the equipment room, had literally loaded the pads with additional weights. Mr. Sowers apparently didn't know whereof he spoke when he suggested on several occasions that the team "get the lead out".

Weighted or not, the powerful JV outfit did very well this year, scoring over forty-six points per game in their unofficial league.

The Bees, trying hard to defend their title, were unsuccessful; but they saved the season by "crushing" Keppel 7-6.

Our dynamic little men, the Cees, tied for the Pacific League Championship with Monrovia, losing unfortunately in the playoff.

By some strange report Philablaster got the idea that Mr. Miller, our basketball coach, was from the South. Anyway, there was some reason to check on the information that our roundballers, who had won so many games by one or two points, were being paid to shave the score.

Our erstwhile lawmaker was escorted to the practice court in the girls' gym by Elbert "Goosey" Swan, the six-foot-four inch, eighty-three pound, Dee basketball star. Arriving at the gym, the Senator was amazed to see Coach Miller spraying the room with a spray from a bottle labeled Skunk Bait No. 306. This powerful germicide was reputedly designed to kill cold germs.

"Ah say, Elbert boy, what's wrong with him?"

"Nothing, your Honor," replied Elbert in his high-pitched, masculine voice. "You see, at the first of the season the Varsity won the Pasadena Tournament for the fourth consecutive time. And we won most of our practice games. Everybody thought we were a cinch for a second league title. Then it all happened. Because of the flu we were seldom at full strength during the first round of play. The best we could hope for was a tie for third place. Say, Senator, do you suppose germ warfare could have anything to do with this?"

"Well, son, I'm certainly willing to investigate."

Two wins over our arch rivals were the only solace the Bee squad could get out of a long, heartbreaking season; but such wins are certainly sweet.

The Cees played it up to the hilt and finished only one game behind the leaders. But disaster caught up with the Dee outfit; it was that old one-point loss for too many games.

Well, the relay did it again! So is it any wonder that the entire squad appeared at the very next meeting of the student legislature? The Speaker asked to be heard. He formally requested, with the full support of the entire squad, that Alhambra petition the League for the abolition of the relay. It seems that three out of four meets were lost and one meet tied solely because of the relay. Alhambra might have finished second, and certainly no worse than third, in the dual meet competition.

Without resorting to any kind of alibi, Coach Cushman had every reason to be very proud of some of the individual performances of Varsity track men. He saw a school record broken and outstanding instances of the old "come through" spirit which gladdens every coach's heart.

The Bees showed great promise in early meets but were unable to keep up with the very fast company.

The Cees finished third in their loop. From present indications both squads should furnish lots of material to next year's Varsity.

Again we may be compelled to fall back on the plea of "building for the future". Certainly there is no intended reflection on the boys who are performing much above expectations based upon their comparatively short experience.

The coach only smiles when he is asked what next year will bring. He knows. He knows.

The JV squad offers definite promise. Some of its members still have two or three years of competition left.

Baseball

It was the opening game of the season at Almansor Park, and there sat Philablaster, big as life, ready to exercise his senatorial prerogative by hurling out the first ball. Such time as he could spare from building up himself he was always willing to devote to neglecting his job.

Apparently his presence so far has done very little to harm the season. The Patrickmen are in the runner-up spot as we go to press. Solid pitching and fine defensive play are responsible in part. With some luck and more effective hitting we may surprise the whole league.

Measles almost whipped the J. V. team. They didn't have them; neither did Coach Hatch, but his son did. Father was quarantined along with the rest of the family.
